this book presents a new reading of the history of french social science and religion through an investigation of early sociology s techniques for narrating the category of belief the author argues that by looking at the history of social sciences in this manner we gain a deeper understanding of both our present debates on post secularity as well as our modernist past both of which were thoroughly shaped by their reflections and critiques on the notion of belief yet failed to enter into any sort of meaningful communication with each other this book seeks to rectify this failure by introducing the concept of belief languages an anthropological framework designed to historicize different discussions on belief and allow for their comparative description and analysis comprehensible way the thought processes of skilled teachers each case is then unpacked further to clearly address the question of what history teachers need to know to teach in an investigative way the challenge of rethinking history education is a must read for anyone looking for a guide to both the theory and practice of what it means to teach historical thinking to engage in investigative practice with students and to increase students capacity to critically read and assess the nature of the complex culture in which they live
