this book further develops both the traditional and the behavioural approach to competition law and applies these approaches to a variety of timely issues it discusses several fundamental questions regarding competition law and economics and explores the applications of competition law and economics in turn the book analyses the interplay of intellectual property rights and patents in various aspects of competition law and investigates the impacts that developments in information technology such as big data analytics have on competition law the book also discusses the impact of energy law reforms on energy markets from a competition law perspective competition law is a classic field of economic analysis this is largely due to the fact that competition law uses terms such as market price and competition and must therefore rely on economic know how and analyses in the united states economic analysis has greatly influenced not just the scholarship on antitrust law but also judicial decisions and agency enforcement antitrust law and economics are based on the traditional paradigm of neoclassical economics which relies on the assumption that the market players i e consumers and producers are rational this approach to competition law was later received in europe under the banner of a more economic approach for the past two decades behavioural law and economics which seeks to generate better insights into legal phenomena by providing more realistic psychological foundations for economic models and to offer a multitude of applications in legislation and legal adjudication has challenged the traditional economic approach to law in general and more recently to competition law specifically the united states and the european union operate the world's two most powerful systems of competition law and policy whose enforcement and judicial institutions employ similar concepts and legal language yet the two regimes sometimes reach very different results on significant antitrust issues in the atlantic divide in antitrust daniel gifford and robert kudrle show that a combination of differences in social values political institutions and legal precedent inhibit close convergence the book explores the main contested areas of contemporary antitrust mergers price discrimination predatory pricing exclusive supply conditional rebating intellectual property and schumpeterian competition the authors explore how the prevailing antitrust analyses differ in the eu and the u.s. the policy ramifications of these differences and how the analyses used by the enforcement authorities or the courts in each of these several areas relate to each other several themes run through the substantive areas treated in the book pricing incentives and constraints welfare effects and whether competition tends to be viewed as an efficiency generating process or as rivalry the notorious microsoft case offers a useful lens to examine copyright patents and trade secrets and the authors take the opportunity to contemplate competition policy in dynamic innovative industries more broadly for the eu competition policy has also functioned as a mechanism to bond national markets together in the eu structure the usa federal from the beginning did not require this instrumental aspect in its antitrust doctrines the atlantic divide concludes with forecasts and suggestions about how greater compatibility if not convergence might ultimately be attained traditional doctrines of economic policy have largely failed to address the fact that human economies are evolving complex adaptive systems rather than equilibrating mechanisms this volume represents a step towards a more evolutionary approach to economic policy
